Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Monday 11 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Southwest: mild, cloudy, damp. Northeast: Ice risk then mainly sunny.

This Evening and Tonight:
Rain and hill snow in the north sinking south, clearing skies following, allowing some icy conditions across Scotland, northern England and Northern Ireland. Wales, central and southern England staying cloudy and milder with some rain, heavy on western hills.

Tuesday:
Some southwestern areas staying cloudy, damp and fairly mild. Elsewhere plenty of cold sunny weather after the icy start, but a few wintry showers clipping the far north and east.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Changeable with a mixture of heavy rain, sleet, snow, and more (mainly temporary) settled spells. Temperatures for most swinging between cold and mild, with some overnight frosts expected.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.